

1. Davidson lays out three basic arguments for the existence of events, which stick with us today. Try to summarize them in one or two sentences.

1. The argument from modifiers:

2. The argument from reference:

3. The argument from direct perception:

2. Describe how the adverbial modifier through a telescope provides evidence that we cannot use (most) manner adverbs to modify subjects instead of events.

3. We can add arguments to support the existence of events. Take the following sentence. What evidence does it offer?

(1) Jen fell twice.

What about the next?

(2) It rained.

4. List at least five entailments related to the adverbials in the following sentence:

(3) Jen jumped twice in the garden to impress her friends.
